Afterschool and summer programs play an important role in supporting the healthy development of young people and are all the more critical today. Approximately 6 in 10 parents are more worried about their child’s emotional well-being today than they were before the pandemic, and missing out on social connections and friendships is a top concern for parents. Recognizing the serious impact the pandemic has had on young people’s health and well-being, in October 2021, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry, and the Children’s Hospital Association joined together to declare a National State of Emergency in Children’s Mental Health.¹

As parents increasingly look to afterschool programs to support young people’s overall health and development, but issues of access prevent approximately 214,000 young people in Nevada from participating in programs, action is needed to ensure that all young people have the same opportunities to help them forge healthy futures.

Nevada parents view afterschool as important to the healthy development of children

From building social skills and positive relationships with mentors to keeping kids safe in the hours after school, the 2020 America After 3PM study finds that Nevada parents overwhelmingly agree that programs are providing a broad set of supports for children that are integral to their healthy development.

Parents agree that afterschool programs:

Afterschool programs support healthy development

Focusing on the activities and supports provided by afterschool programs, a safe environment, knowledgeable and caring staff, and the opportunity to build life skills are among the most important aspects Nevada parents look for when selecting their child’s afterschool program. And, in keeping with parents’ priorities, America After 3PM finds that a strong majority of parents are satisfied with the supports they value most for their child.

The need to increase access and availability of afterschool programs

Afterschool and summer programs are vital to communities across the nation, providing the supports that young people need now, more than ever. However, cost and access top the list of roadblocks to afterschool program participation in the state, with approximately 214,000 Nevada children who would have been enrolled in a program if one were available.

Cost and access are roadblocks to afterschool program participation. Programs are too expensive, transportation issues, no safe way to and from program, and lack of available programs.

For every child in afterschool in Nevada, 3 are waiting for an available program.

Parents favor public funding for afterschool programs to expand opportunities for kids in underserved communities.

Action is needed at the local, state, and federal levels to ensure access to afterschool programs in Nevada for every young person who wants to participate.

About the survey

America After 3PM is a national survey of parents or guardians of school-aged children, screening 31,055 households and having 14,393 households completing in-depth interviews via an online survey using a blend of national consumer panels. At least 200 households completed interviews in every state and Washington, D.C., between January 27 and March 17, 2020. Where the minimum could not be met, supplemental telephone interviews were conducted. Data were collected by Edge Research on behalf of the Afterschool Alliance. The percentages and projected numbers in America After 3PM are based on survey responses from parents. In Nevada, 498 households and 570 children were screened for this study. Child-level statewide projections and total school enrollment numbers are based on 2018-2019 Department of Education, National Center for Education Statistics data. Total school enrollment for Nevada is 497,074.
